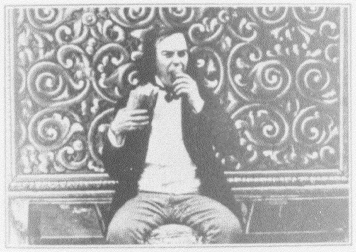
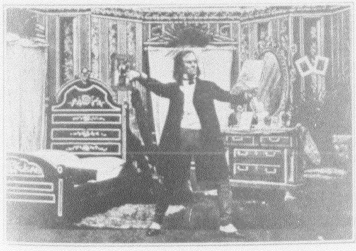
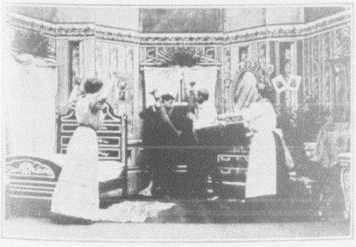
The Actor Annoys the Boarders

COPYRIGHT 1907

LENGTH, 210 FEET - - - PRICE, $23.10







An actor decides to move. Actors always move. They never pay rent. The landlady asks for the rent in advance. The actor promises the rent. That is all the rent the landlady will get. After the landlady has gone the actor unpacks his trunks, consisting of a little hand satchel in which there is a sausage and a loaf of bread. After having partaken of his frugal meal, he begins to recite, and the boarders come, one after another, to complain. The actor continues his recitations, notwithstanding the protests of his fellow boarders. At last the boarders come, together with the landlady, take the actor by the legs and throw him out of the window. The actor is still looking for a new boarding house.

S. Lubin

LARGEST MANUFACTURER OF
Films, Slides, Stereopticon and Life Motion Picture Machines

19-21 S. EIGHTH ST., PHILADELPHIA, PA., U. S. A.